Report of a case and review of the literature. Vascular cystic proliferation is a well-documented histologic finding of hepatocellular carcinoma. This report outlines the steps and treatment of the diagnosis of vascular cystic proliferation of the liver. A 59-year-old woman presented with abnormal liver function tests. Abdominal ultrasound demonstrated a large lobulated mass in segment 5 of the liver. Computed tomography of the abdomen showed multiple irregular cysts in the liver. Operative laparotomy was performed, with wedge resection of the left lateral segment of the liver. The liver resected was a well-circumscribed, brown, multilobular mass containing numerous miliary cysts. Microscopically, the liver contained a proliferation of small cystic structures filled with cellular debris. Rare, binucleated hepatocytes were noted. Hepatocellular carcinoma was diagnosed and the patient was treated with hepatic arterial infusion chemotherapy. Vascular cystic proliferation of the liver can be encountered in hepatocellular carcinoma, and is an important diagnostic clue.Q: Can I use a css transform for a node inside a svg? I want to create a svg with a transform inside it, like this: .transform { transform: rotate(-30deg); } ... But sadly it doesn't work. I created a fiddle: Does anyone know if there's an alternative? A:
